herself, have waged a vicious battle in court filings.

Hedge fund billionaire Ken Griffin sold a three-bedroom downtown condominium for nearly $1.33 million, according to two real estate websites.

Griffin sold the property in the Bloomingdale's building on East Delaware Place on Feb. 13, according to Trulia. Redfin has the same price but says the sale closed Feb. 17.

County records do not reflect the sale, and it is not clear who bought the property. The property, which has three full bathrooms, was listed by Chezi Rafaeli of Coldwell Banker.

Griffin, founder of Chicago-based hedge fund and financial services firm Citadel, paid nearly $1.02 million for the condo in 1995, according to Cook County property records.

In July, Griffin paid almost $30 million for two condos in the Waldorf Astoria Chicago. A venture affiliated with Griffin bought a 46th-floor unit in the building, 11 E. Walton St., for $16 million, according to Cook County property records. Another Griffin venture paid $13.3 million in August for a 37th-floor condo there, county records show.

A spokesman for Citadel declined to comment.

In January Griffin asked a judge to set a trial date for his divorce from Anne Dias Griffin. Since the CEO of Citadel filed for divorce in July, he and Dias Griffin, a hedge-fund veteran
